Session 1- 11.30 AM to 1 PM

- File management--analogous to the file cabinet and its use – Working with the Files--analogous to picking up and preparing to use a calculator or some other tool
- – Configuration of your working environment--analogous to shifting your desk around to suit you better. An OS is a program that acts as an intermediary between a user of a computer
- computer hardware Goals: Execute user programs, make the comp. system easy to use, utilize hardware efficiently Computer system: Hardware ↔ OS ↔ Applications ↔ Users (↔ = 'uses') OS is: Resource allocator: decides between conflicting requests for efficient and fair resource use Control program: controls execution of programs to prevent errors
- improper use of computer Kernel: the one program running at all times on the computer • Bootstrap program: loaded at power-up or reboot Stored in ROM or EPROM (known as firmware), Initializes all aspects of system, loads OS kernel and starts execution • I/O and CPU can execute concurrently
- Device controllers inform CPU that it is finished w/ operation by causing an interrupt ◦ Interrupt transfers control to the interrupt service routine generally, through the interrupt vector, which contains the addresses of all the service routines ,Incoming interrupts are disabled

Session 2- 1.30 AM to 2.30 PM

- Disk controller determines logical interaction between the device and the computer.
- Caching – copying information into faster storage system Multiprocessor Systems: Increased throughput, economy of scale, increased reliability, can be asymmetric or symmetric,
- lustered systems – Linked multiprocessor systems Multiprogramming – Provides efficiency via job scheduling when OS has to wait (ex: for I/O), switches to another job Timesharing – CPU switches jobs so frequently that each user can interact with each job while it is running (interactive computing) • Dual-mode operation allows OS to protect itself and other system components – User mode and kernel mode ,some instructions are only executable in kernel mode, these are privileged
- Single-threaded processes have one program counter, multi-threaded processes
- have one PC per thread • Protection – mechanism for controlling access of processes or users t
- INTERRUPT • STORAGE STRUCTURE: Main memory – random access, volatile ◦

Dr.Hemant M. Baradkar
Principal
Jagadambha College of Engineering & Technology,Arni Road,Kinhi,Yavatmal

Secondary storage – extension of main memory That provides large non-volatile storage Disk – divided into tracks which o resources defined by the OS Security – defense of a system against attacks , User IDs (UID), one per user, and Group IDs, determine which users and groups of users have which privileges

PROCESS SYNCHRONIZATION:

Introduction to process synchronization Process synchronization will be clear with the following example. Consider the code for consumer and producer as follows Producer while(1) { while(counter = = buffersize); buffer[in]=nextproduced; in = (in+1) % buffersize; counter ++; } Consumer while(1) { while(counter = = 0); nextconsumed = buffer[out]; out = (out+1) % buffersize; counter --; } Both the codes are correct separately but will not function correctly when executed concurrently. This is because the counter++ may be executed in machine language as three separate statements as register1 = counter register1 = register1 + 1 counter = register1 and the counter-- as register2 = counter register2 = register2 - 1 counter = register2

The execution of these statements for the two processes may lead to the following condition
